(U) District of Columbia – Hackers Tried Breaching Email Accounts of Election Officials in Nine States

(U) Washington – Unidentified hackers tried to breach the email accounts of election officials in nine states last October in an apparent "coordinated effort" to target election officials, the FBI said. The phishing effort didn't appear to have a big impact; some election officials who received the malicious emails said they did not click on them. But it was a reminder of cyber threats that election officials must contend with in an election season. The FBI judges that cyber actors will likely continue or increase their targeting of US election officials with phishing campaigns in the 2022 US midterm elections.
